Infants will spend the better part of their day sleeping, typically anywhere from 14-17 hours a day! Investing in a great crib mattress is money well spent, but don't forget about the time your baby may also be spending in a pack and play. More: One New Mama's Honest Review of Baby Merlin's Magic Sleepsuit Pack and Plays are not only convenient portable sleeping options, but they are also a great option for corralling little ones with a safe place to play. Anytime baby sleep comes into play you want to reduce any risk of SIDS, meaning that having a sturdier mattress is key. Even though they come with a thin sleeping surface, spending a little extra money on a quality mattress will give you the peace of mind that when it's serving as a place to sleep, your baby will be comfortably supported. Our Top Picks What to Consider when Purchasing a Pack and Play Mattress 1. Firmness When you think about babies, your first thought might be soft and plush; however, when it comes to sleep you want a firm mattress and a tight fitting sheet. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) "Mattresses should be firm and should maintain their shape even when the fitted sheet designated for that model is used." As infants grow into toddlers you can consider a mattress with a little more give that isn't quite so hard, so take into consideration the age of your child who will be using the pack and play. There are also options where you can flip between a firm side for a baby and a softer side for a toddler. 2. Material Consider the material both on the inside and outside of a mattress. Added chemicals are often used to make mattresses flame retardant, so depending on your comfort level keep that in mind. You can find mattresses ranging all over the place from lightweight foam, organic cotton, plastic-based, water resistant and many more. Keep an eye out for materials that are easily washable to avoid mildew and other germs. 3. Portability If you're truly using a pack and play for easy portability and convenience, you don't want to have to also be lugging around a mattress as well. There are options that fold up just as small for easy packing and many come with their own carry bag with handles for convenience. Whether folding up to store away or folding up to travel, tri-fold pack and play mattresses are a good option. How We Chose Our Favorites We scoured reviews all over the internet for the best pack and play mattresses so you don't have to. We also consulted real parents and thought about our own parenting experiences to help choose the best pack and play mattresses for you and your baby. How to Use a Pack and Play Pack and plays serve several purposes, from a toddler play yard to a safe sleeping area. If you're looking to purchase a pack and play, we recommend the basic Graco Pack and Play or the Graco Pack and Play Travel Dome with Portable Bassinet. Convenient for travel: If your child is still sleeping in a crib at home, then chances are they can still comfortably sleep in a pack and play. If you're traveling somewhere that won't have a crib, a pack and play is a convenient alternative. Just because you're traveling doesn't mean you have to sacrifice a comfortable mattress. Plus, they are super easy to assemble. Safe sleep space for extra rooms or houses: If you're sleeping with your baby in your room for the first few months, or if they need to nap in a different room than the nursery, or they frequently visit with a relative, a pack and play is a great alternative option than a second crib that permanently takes up space. A portable crib mattress means you don't need to take up floor space when not in use. Portability: One of the best perks to a pack and play is that it is portable and easy to set up and break down. If you're spending time in the yard, on the deck, or at a friend's house you can use it as a safe play space, and then when your baby gets sleepy, pop the mattress in and let them enjoy a nap on the go. Many mattresses are easily washable, so you don't have to worry about the dirt that comes with a nap while on the go. Your partner in parenting from baby name inspiration to college planning. Terms CA Supply Chain Privacy CA Privacy Rights Do Not Sell My Personal Information Internet-Based Ads TM & © 2022 Target Brands, Inc. © 1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates I know a lot of people may know this, but I also see a lot of posts still asking "What is actually required to play these modes." So after a little bit of trial an error here is (for at least the XBOX) the minimum amount of content you need to install to play either one or the other. I'll also include the file sizes as well. I hope this helps some people. The following is required. Warzone: Base Game [92.0GB] - No other pack is required at all to install in order to play this mode. Total SSD requirements: [92.0GB] Link: and Multiplayer: Base Game [92.0GB], Multiplayer Pack 1 [6.0GB], Multiplayer Pack 2 [22.1GB], Multiplayer And Special Ops Pack [6.7GB] Total SSD requirements [126.8GB] Optional: High Resolution Pack 1 [23.6GB], High Resolution Pack 2 [N/A], High Resolution Pack 3 [7.9GB], High Resolution Pack 4 [8.6GB], High Resolution Pack 5 [6.6GB] Total SSD requirements for Optional Installs: [46.7GB] (NOTE: High Resolution Pack 2 is replaced by High Resolution Pack 3) Total SSD requirements for Warzone & Multiplayer with Optional installs [173.5GB] NOTE: Other than what is listed above, no other pack or DLC is required to install in order to play these modes. For Xbox players you also do NOT need to reinstall any DLC (Starter Pack, Launch Pack, C.O.D.E. Defender Pack, C.O.D.E. Challenger Pack, Operator Edition Pack, Underwater Demo Team Classic Ghost Bundle, Etc. These are tied to your Activision account and aren't needed once unlocked in game. Edit: Make sure your NAT is OPEN. Check/setup your port forwarding within your Router settings The Xbox series X uses the following ports. TCP and UDP: 3074 UDP: 88, 500, 3074, 3544, 4500 Modern Warfare and Warzone use these ports for online. 2. Be sure to disable Texture Streaming for better performance. Edit 3: Be sure to download the base game and packs to one storage device if possible so that you don't run into any issues actually playing the modes. Here's how to make the most out of the pack and play so you can use this one thing in many different ways. I am a minimalist mom when it comes to baby gear. I was moving when I had my first baby... so money was what we needed for our baby shower. This was great in a few ways! First, I could buy what I needed when I needed it. Secondly, I wasn't given tons of stuff I thought I "should" use. However, one item that I bought early on and have used time and time again (on three continents) is a play yard, pack 'n play, or playpen (whatever the cool kids are calling it these days). The one shown in the photo below is awesome because... it can go through doorways without having to be broken down. With four kids in four years - and being a proponent of creative sleeping arrangements - I use our play yards all the time for napping, night sleep, and travel. Note: It must be said, however, that you should never put your baby in the play yard, stroller, high chair, or infant seat all the time to the detriment of their development. Using this type of gear can be both helpful and convenient, but should not be used as babysitters. Here are 8 different ways you can use your pack and play After much practice and research, I have discovered eight main ways to utilize that pack and play (there may be more than you think)! Trust me, you'll want to get the most use of this incredible mommy tool... check out these eight ways to use your pack and play. To get you started, I have added a list of the top 5 most popular pack and plays available: Portable Playard- With over 3,000 positive reviews the Sturdy Play Yard with Comfortable Mattress and Changing Station is a must for any mommy. It comes in a beautiful blue & green design and is very affordably priced! Nursery Center- The name doesn't do this pack and play justice. It's a top seller on Amazon and the Baby Trend Pack and Play has features such as a removable organizer of baby essential and a one hand locking mechanism. Playard- This Sturdy Play Yard with Mattress and Toys has almost 3,000 positive ratings and is super easy to pack up, carry with, and store. Pack and Play- The Graco Pack and Play includes a full sized bassinet and push button compact fold, which is way for storing. Travel Playard- This Portable Travel Playard has great traveling reviews and has a 5 star review! One thing that I really love about it is that it can be set up/taken down with a push and a pull of one hand! Get my cheat sheets (newborn up to elementary aged kids) and find your family's groove. Use them for nap times, meal times, bedtimes, chore times, play times AND more! 1. The Pack and Play is Good for Napping Sometimes, it's simply inconvenient for kids to nap in the same room together. This is especially true for a toddler with an older sibling (here's a big fat reason why this doesn't work). The pack and play is a great alternative to this situation. It allows you to give your kid a nap in whichever room you would like. An added benefit to this is that you can get your child used to napping in a new location. Napping in another room or area will more likely allow your child to nap well at family's homes, a sitter's house, or in a hotel away from home. Read: How to get all your kids to nap at the same time 2. Independent Play Time We're big fans of independent play time! The pack and play is one way I've been able to accomplish this with small children. Set some toys in there, and watch your child play safely. As you can imagine, the pack and play a good way for babies and early toddlers to play without falling and hitting head. The pack and play allows them to move, bounce, and play with their toys safely. Also, pack and plays have mesh sides! This is important because you can see in at all times. It can even be a great place for baby to have tummy time. 3. Corraling with a Pack and Play One of the best strategies for mothers with babies close together is to corral. This is how you can do necessary grown up things without your child getting into things while you aren't looking. Sometimes... someone comes to the door, you get a phone call, or need to cook dinner. Obviously, if you have a toddler who is a climber, using a play yard will come in handy. 4. Beach Trips Now, if you're going down to the beach for an hour or two bringing a pack and play along isn't worth the hassle, in my opinion. But if you are camping out for the whole day, and have a nice shelter or umbrella, bringing a pack and play is a lifesaver. Others may disagree, but it's the exact opposite of relaxing to hold baby the entire time at the beach. For me, to be at the beach for 8 hours and either myself or my husband have to hold the baby the entire time is exhausting. This is especially true is baby is already walking... 5. Use the Pack and Play at Your Family's Homes My mom likes to keep a pack and play at her house so that my youngest two can nap or sleep there if they stay over. She has a spare room, but the bed is large and tall and the littler ones can't be counted on not to roll off. Safety first, of course. (What you must do if you let a toddler share a room with a baby) If we have impromptu visits and the baby gets tired, there's a place to sleep. This is more versatile than a crib which is not easily broken down or put up. Read: How to get your baby to nap at someone else's house 6. Places with Big Drop-Offs (A huge help with separation anxiety...) If your child is used to napping in his/her pack and play, it's not such a stressful thing for them to nap at the sitters. Especially if your child is having some "drop off anxiety", they may find comfort in having a bit of their familiar surrounding stay with them. This is the equivalence to you bringing your favorite pillow when staying in a hotel room. The familiar pack and play may add an extra comfort element for your toddler. After all, you want them to be comfortable while staying the day with the sitter or other family members. 7. When You Need "a Minute" Let's be real... sometimes a mama just needs a minute! This is especially true is baby is a hip hugger or extra needy today. Having a handy pack and play gives you a minute to calm down, relax, and stop being angry. As a mommy, you could use a minute to pee, call a friend, call your mother, or whatever. The truth is, using a pack and play can make sure everyone is safe... so you can be alone for a minute. If you have a little crawler or pre-toddler, using the pack and play is a great way to get a few minutes peace. As long as you aren't doing this for long stretches to Netflix binge, it's not something to feel guilty about. 8. Use Pack and Play as a Newborn Sleeper in Your Room We always put our babies in our room for their first few months of life. Nursing, safety, and overall peace of mind are found when baby is close. I'm nursing and do not sleep well if I have to walk to their room and feed them sitting up. By the time I get back to my room I am wide awake. By keeping a pack and play in our room, I can feed the baby... even without totally waking up fully. How about that! Plus, he is there so I can check on him. Here are thoughts on letting the baby sleep in your room. When they are sleeping through the night with no feeds, then they go to their more permanent sleep situation. Read: 10 reasons your baby can't sleep 9. Hotels and VRBO's More often than not, hotels and VRBO's have cribs available. I've had success using cribs in both places, but I've also had situations where there were none... and that's a disaster! If you are driving somewhere, it's good to put a pack and play in the car if you're able. Check the ratings on the pack and plays listed at the top for travel ease. Kids (toddlers through elementary school) will learn everything from life management, social, survival, and hygiene skills PLUS MORE! FAQs on Pack and Plays is a pack n play safe for sleeping? Yes! If you keep all the same safety standards you would in a crib, no toys, no loose blankets, put baby to sleep on their backs, etc. then it is safe. What age can you use pack and play? You can use the pack and play from birth until your child grows out of it. It is a great thing to keep in the car or at a relative's house, etc. That way, you can visit and still have a familiar place for bubs to sleep. Can a 2 year old sleep in a pack n play? If they can fit in it, they can sleep in it! It won't be as comfortable on a nightly basis as a bed, of course. But for travel or naps on the go it is a perfect solution. What is a pack n play used for? You can use the pack n play for napping, independent play time, for corralling your little one, sleeping at night for travel, and much more. Do I need a pack and play for a newborn? If you are going to be home of the most of the time and traveling very little, you don't need it. If you frequently go to others' homes, travel, or like to put baby to nap no matter where you are, it's a great buy. .:
